ROUNDHOUSE HISTORY

Averell Harriman, founder of Sun Valley, built the Roundhouse in 1939 with $20,000 left over from the construction of the first three chairlifts on world famous Bald Mountain. He gave this warming hut and restaurant its unique name recalling the octagonal shape that reminded him of the switching stations used in the railroad industry. Harriman reportedly scoffed at the order for the structure's 46 paned windows, but once in place, he found the spectacular multi-faceted views the answer to any doubts.

The Roundhouse immediately became the place to be, and be seen. To rub elbows with Hollywood royalty, especially after its starring role in the 1941 film, "Sun Valley Serenade." One can imagine the excitement as spectators stood on the deck watching Europe's elite Alpine skiers race down the Roundhouse Slope. This nostalgic spot was often the location of moonlight parties as well. The partiers, after reveling into the midnight hour, would ski down the un-groomed slopes to the base below.
